We are proud to share with you our 2016 Annual Report. Our programs are transformative for over 36,000 New York children, adults and families. We are a home for people with intellectual and developmental disabilities. We’re a pre-school for children with autism and a fair shot at employment for people with special needs. We’re a child’s connection to a forever home and a college scholarship for youth who have grown up in foster care. We’re a safe after-school program for our city’s children and a fresh start for those who have struggled with addiction. We’re an energy grant for senior citizens trying to make ends meet. We are opportunity. We are life-changing.

We are able to achieve this because HeartShare and its Family of Services strive for excellence. The HeartShare School received a very positive program audit from New York State and saw several of its students with autism transition to mainstream classrooms. HeartShare Wellness’ medical clinic merged with Metro Community Health Centers to reach more patients throughout New York City and expanded its Article 16 Clinic services for people with developmental disabilities. HeartShare St. Vincent’s Services achieved its inaugural accreditation from the independent, international COA, while continuing to grow its programs. Its American Dream Program, helping youth in foster care achieve their college and career dreams, now has a record 50 enrolled scholars.

We’re able to achieve all this because of people like you. You’ve donated, volunteered and built a meaningful career with us. Today, you can share the stories in this report, visit our new heartshare.org website or follow us on social media. Today, you can tell the world that investing in human potential is truly the greatest gift you can give.

We are and continue to be incredibly grateful for your friendship and support.

Sincerely,

Paul J. Torre

Our Mission

The mission of HeartShare Human Services is to nurture and support, with dignity and respect, children, adults and families in order to expand opportunities and enhance lives.

“We are real in this house.”
—Michael, Giannattasio Residence

Residential Services

Four years ago, Michael moved into Giannattasio Residence. On his own for the first time, Michael kept to himself, but it didn’t take long for Michael to break out of his shell. Growing increasingly outspoken, Michael connected with his housemates, who are swift to advocate for people with special needs. Michael also developed a friendship with the residence manager, Thomas Hoefel. Tommy has worked at HeartShare and professionally as a DJ for 25 years. Together, Michael and Tommy share a passion for music and for helping others. “I plan to start a business to help people with disabilities become DJs,” shared Michael. With Tommy as his mentor, Michael started playing gigs two years ago and is on the path to fulfilling his lifelong dream. Together, they’ve shopped for new equipment at a DJ convention and researched music business classes. Most importantly, they see eye to eye. “We are real in this house. Tommy and I say how it is and that’s how we learn from each other. I wouldn’t have it any other way,” said Michael.
Destiny has explored her life as an artist throughout New York City. Through HeartShare’s Brooklyn Day Habilitation Program, she’s experienced arts education at prestigious city institutions and created her own body of work. The Museum of Modern Art, the Transit Museum and Dedalus Foundation, just to name a few, are extending educational opportunities to HeartShare program participants, including Destiny. “Life is art,” said Destiny at MoMA, as she framed a shot on her iPhone. The photos inspire her own creations, including during classes led by MoMA educator Rachel Cohen at the HeartShare day program. Destiny’s pieces have been exhibited in ArtShare shows throughout Brooklyn and Manhattan since the program’s inception. She’s also lent her craftsmanship to HeartShare’s Jewelry Studio, which sells a beautiful selection of handmade earrings, necklaces and bracelets.
On a beautiful day, Henry and Gavin will not be found inside. Through Community Habilitation, Henry spends time with Gavin, a one-to-one Direct Support Professional, in the community. On a typical day, Henry will visit a senior center nearby to enjoy the company of his peers and a good game of Scrabble. Then, Henry and Gavin grab some lunch or take a walk in the park. Henry, who was a messenger on Wall Street for nearly 30 years, is an expert in giving directions when they visit lower Manhattan together. “It’s not just directions. Henry has taught me life lessons,” said Gavin, who is capturing Henry’s stories on paper. Henry, who wore an iron brace as a child, grew up at Willowbrook State School and finally was released in his 20s. “They told me that I couldn’t be a messenger. They told me I couldn’t walk. But I did,” he shared. Henry has an incredibly sunny disposition that has not been clouded by his days at Willowbrook. For now, Henry is happy to be retired and is looking forward to his next Mets game with Gavin at his side.

“Told me I couldn’t walk. But I did.”

Devin stood out when he moved into Tunie-Generet over three years ago. Devin is funny, stylish and particularly ambitious. Devin attended HeartShare’s Aiello Day Habilitation Program, but he knew he didn’t necessarily fit there. “I can do more. I belong at work,” Devin said. Devin needed training to be considered eligible for a position, but he was willing to learn. Through HeartShare’s Pre-Vocational & Employment Programs, which offer people with intellectual and developmental disabilities a fair chance in the workplace, Devin now works at Modell’s Sporting Goods. Devin organizes merchandise in the stock room and in the store. In his spare time, Devin enjoys listening to music. The Tunie-Generet Residence staff encouraged Devin to take that passion to the stage. During a drama class in SoHo, Devin learned lines that helped grow his confidence and forge friendships. At work and at play, HeartShare has helped Devin lead a richer, more independent life.
Danny is very independent. With the help of his Medicaid Service Coordinator, Jawan James, Danny can more easily access available resources and supports. “Danny knows what he wants. I just submit the paperwork to make sure he gets his services,” Jawan said modestly. Danny, who lives at HeartShare’s Park Avenue Residence in Queens, has many HeartShare teams at his side to help him achieve his goals. HeartShare’s Residential, Day Habilitation and Employment Programs have brought Danny closer and closer to leading the life he wants. Through the Queens Day Habilitation Program, Danny started his employment journey at Applebee’s. Following that experience, Danny learned the bus route to Queens College, where he volunteered and received on-site training from his job coach. Danny now works at Queens College. He also hops on the LIRR to visit his family. “This is my life,” said Danny. “This is what I always wanted to do.” The Queens Developmental Disabilities Council recognized Danny’s accomplishments with a “Celebrating Success” award earlier this year.
Rodney has been a part of HeartShare’s Heels & Wheels Respite/Recreation Group since its inception in 1996. That’s also the year that Rodney’s parents passed away and his sister Robin became his primary caregiver. “As long as I see that smile, life is wonderful,” she shared. Robin loves taking care of her brother and she knows that HeartShare does too. Like any caring guardian, Robin worried about Rodney during his first HeartShare outings, but she soon learned that he was in good hands. With his group, Rodney watches movies, gets crafty with pottery, explores museums and ventures the outdoors in the Poconos. Whether dressing up for church or dancing the night away, Rodney has a debonair sense of style. Rodney especially enjoyed busting out moves at the agency’s annual Family Support Dinner Dance, as well as at his 60th birthday party at Russo’s on the Bay. There’s a reason that his HeartShare family made it to Rodney’s guest list. In addition to staff members to whom he’s grown close, Heels & Wheels helped Rodney re-connect with those from his childhood. “I love my friends at HeartShare,” said Rodney.
Sixteen year old Addissa talks a mile a minute about school, politics and especially her older sister, who raised her. “Shenika is my rock. She took care of me when I was a baby,” explained Addissa, who was only two when their mother passed away. The eldest of eight and 21 years old at the time, Shenika took on the responsibility of raising her siblings, including becoming an advocate for her baby sister. After she finished college, Shenika persevered to earn her Master’s degree, ultimately becoming a parole officer due to her desire to help others. Throughout all this, Shenika learned more about her sister’s special needs and available resources with the help of people like Linda Rasport, Senior Coordinator of the Options Program. With her Options grant from HeartShare, Addissa attends camp where she enjoys swimming, bowling and track. “To me, HeartShare is opportunity. This is a camp that we ordinarily never would have been able to afford. It’s good for her health and she’s made lasting friends. I’m so grateful,” said Shenika.
DeAndre is full of energy. He races around on his scooter, something that he was never able to do before. DeAndre has a condition that only 1 in 32,000 babies are born with. He is missing fingers on his right hand, which makes it difficult for him to grip and achieve balance. To him, it’s also a daily reminder that he’s different from his pre-school peers. HeartShare Occupational Therapist Olga Khazanova added adaptive technology to the scooter handle, which helped DeAndre glide around as he always wanted to. DeAndre doesn’t walk around with his hands in his pockets anymore. “I can do it,” he shouts to his mother, who watches him ride up and down the block by their home. The HeartShare preschool purchased and adapted two scooters for DeAndre—one for school and one for home. “My baby has come a long way,” Sandra said. Sandra was told that DeAndre, who was born less than 2 pounds, wouldn’t live past two or three years old. DeAndre is five and will attend Kindergarten in the fall.
Twelve year old Grace can’t wait to see Diane Grzebyck, the school’s first Board Certified Behavior Analyst, responsible for implementing the school’s ABA curriculum. Diane works closely with students daily, including Grace, to shift away from certain behaviors using positive reinforcement. For Grace, her time with Diane is her incentive. “You’re the best, Ms. Diane!” exclaimed Grace with a smile. Diane’s office has inspired Grace to become a secretary one day. During their afternoon sessions, Diane and Grace make funny faces, talk about what they’ve had for dinner the night before or even dance. Through their time together, Grace is more comfortable reading facial expressions, engaging in conversation, expressing her needs, meeting new people and focusing her attention in class. Grace continues to branch out and grow, including speaking about how much she loves her school at the 2016 Harbor Fitness Race for Autism.

“You’re the best, Ms. Diane!”

Jarvis has been working with Salah Ahmed for about four years now. During their physical therapy sessions, they work on exercises that strengthen and build muscles in Jarvis’ legs. While still in his chair, Ahmed flexes Jarvis’ legs. Then, Jarvis grasps onto the walker and quickly steadies his balance before he starts pacing down the hallway. Whether he’s in his chair or not, there seems to be nothing that slows down Jarvis. “All it takes is some practice,” said Jarvis, who is frequently out in his Brooklyn neighborhood shopping and running errands. “It’s been a pleasure working with Jarvis. Nothing gets in his way,” added Ahmed. Wellness’ Article 16 clinic can now accommodate up to 19,000 patient visits a year. The HeartShare Article 16 Clinic offers speech, occupational and physical therapies, counseling, and evaluations to people with intellectual and developmental disabilities.
Franco is a 60 year old man, who often faced challenges with his mobility. Working with Husar Joseph, his HeartShare Wellness Health Home Care Manager, Franco receives support to achieve better health. Husar Joseph isn’t just an expert in care coordination. “I was a doctor before I came to the U.S. and it gives me facility to talk to physicians on behalf of our clients,” Husar shared. Franco lives on the 12th floor of his building, which is especially difficult when the elevator is broken. Simply to reach his apartment, Franco needed to call 911 to have a team carry him upstairs. To resolve this problem, Husar has been fighting in housing court to have Franco moved to a lower floor. Navigating the housing court is no easy task, but this is the kind of attention Husar provides to his 60 clients, each with their own unique health needs. Also, Franco’s asthma makes it difficult to wheel his chair. Husar helped Franco find a doctor who would recommend him for an electric wheelchair, which he finally has received. “I had such a hard time getting around. Husar helped me so much,” said Franco.
Energy Assistance and Community Development

HeartShare received the 2016 Victorine Q. Adams Excellence Award for its role in creating the largest national network among utility companies, elected officials and community organizations. The award is from the National Energy and Utility Affordability Coalition (NEUAC), an awareness-raising coalition for low-income energy consumers. “It’s more than an energy grant. We’re cultivating a network to help lift senior citizens, veterans and others out of poverty by offering access to food security, rental assistance, telephone access, counseling services and other critical resources,” explained Joseph Guarinello, HeartShare Vice President of Energy Assistance and Community Development. HeartShare’s efforts to educate elected officials have extended to annual trips to our nation’s Capitol, where the team advocates for federal funding. Through those efforts, HeartShare currently reaches 60 of the 62 New York State counties and now has a national platform as a part of NEUAC’s Board.

Quintin is an energetic, sweet two year old boy, who loves toy cars and exploring the playground. Brenda has known Quintin for most of his young life. “Three days after he was born, Quintin was in my arms,” recalled Brenda. It was a challenging journey, but Brenda did what any mother would – work tirelessly to make sure that her son was healthy and happy. “Quintin will always be in a home where he is loved,” said Brenda, who fostered and adopted Quintin. Early on, Quintin was in and out of the hospital, but now, he’s stronger and growing every day. Brenda couldn’t have done it without the HSVS team. “HSVS is like a family. The team goes above and beyond what their jobs require of them,” Brenda said. “Nikisha Steele and John Olufemi were there for me every step of the way and the parent trainings are filled with foster parents who know the ups and downs,” Brenda explained. When asked if she would do things differently, Brenda said she would do it all over again. “He’s my baby. Like any parent, I take all the blessings and the challenges,” said Brenda.

Preventive Services

Seventeen year old Yvesa uses a wheelchair and has several chronic medical conditions. For Tanara, medical appointments for her son were a hardship. As a working mom, it felt impossible to keep up with Yvesa’s many medical appointments. Also, at times, Tanara would have to choose between groceries and taxi fare to bring her wheelchair-bound son to the doctor. HSVS Special Medical Preventive Services helps parents learn how to care for very vulnerable children with multiple medical disabilities or mental health conditions. “My son is connected to additional resources to improve his health and his quality of life,” said Tanara, who now has the help of a Medicaid Service Coordinator to navigate the complexity of Yvesa’s health care routine. Despite all she’s been through, Tanara is grateful for her home, her job and her son, who was hospitalized 8 consecutive months immediately after his birth and continues to live with those conditions. “I’m happy. I have my son and that’s all that matters,” said Tanara.
“Sometimes, you just have to let the little things slide,” said seventeen-year-old Richard, who sounded much wiser than someone his age. “Ms. Tia and Ms. Crystal helped me through difficult moments. There’s a lot to handle in high school and it’s not worth it to be mad,” explained Richard. “Besides, the good that you put into the world comes back to you.”

The HSVS Children’s Community Residences offer a brief stay for children who need support to manage certain behavioral and emotional challenges that cannot be addressed at home. Learning how to handle feelings of anger, Richard found a balance at school and at work. Richard has a passion for writing and Greek mythology, which shine through in his English and history classes at Grover Cleveland High School in Queens. Over the summer, Richard worked at I.S. 238 through New York City’s Summer Youth Employment Program. Even Richard’s hobbies are a part of his mature approach to continuous self-improvement.

“I like playing soccer and chess,” noted Richard. “It helps you to focus and to be forward thinking in real life.”

Chemical Dependency Clinic

Luther started a new chapter in his life when he decided to get sober over 8 years ago. As an African American male, Luther said he was not accustomed to talking openly about things and doing so with the right people made all the difference. Dr. Debra White, a counselor at the HSVS Chemical Dependency Clinic, is one of those people in his support circle. They continue to work together even though Luther already successfully completed the program last year. Time management, strengthening relationships or cultivating positive thoughts are among the many topics on the table for discussion. Luther currently studies and works full time. On a typical day, Luther attends class at LaGuardia Community College, then works the night shift at a men’s shelter helping New York’s homeless. Luther’s life experiences with addiction equip him with the best advice he can offer to those still struggling. “I went through what I did for a reason and now, I’m exactly where I’m supposed to be,” said Luther.

“I’m exactly where I’m supposed to be.”

Benita Miller signed a lifelong commitment to twenty-year old Jasmine through the HSVS Permanency Pact Program, which ensures that young people who have grown up in foster care do not have to navigate the challenges of young adulthood alone. “No matter what it is about, Jasmine knows that I’m there for her,” Benita said. During the time they’ve been paired together, Benita has extended both her family and professional resources to Jasmine. “Jasmine can spend time with my children or tell me about an exam at school. It’s a combination of being a foster parent, as well as a big sister.” Benita Miller, Executive Director of New York City’s Children’s Cabinet and former Administration for Children’s Services (ACS) Deputy Commissioner, has a deep knowledge of what children experiencing foster care need to thrive. “Many older children are not necessarily looking for an adoptive family, but rather a positive, consistent adult,” explained Miller. Growing up is complex and Jasmine realizes guidance is essential. “With Benita’s support, I’m planning my future and finding myself,” she said.

“We have a voice. We are strong.”
—Dea, Skidmore College Student and American Dream Program Scholar

American Dream Program

I want kids entering foster care to have an understanding of their rights within the system. We are strong,” said Dea, a Skidmore College sophomore who plans to major in Business and International Affairs. Although she lived in several states and moved through different schools, Dea overcame the obstacles of a childhood in foster care. Dea was recognized as the 2015 Youth of the Year not only for her ability to achieve academically, but also her leadership. While head of the HSVS Youth Advisory Council, Dea was a strong communicator and role model, who actively motivated her HSVS peers to get involved. “We always talk about the things that are hard for us. We know how the system can be improved. Why not join forces to change them?” Dea’s advocacy skills will serve her well in a career enacting positive social change for kids in foster care. “We have the voice that should be guiding change in child welfare. We will make a difference,” said Dea.

Shirley Tanyhill Beacon Youth Program

Treasure is thirteen years old and a leader among her peers. Walking around her Beacon program with a yellow HeartShare St. Vincent’s t-shirt, Treasure has intricate knowledge of what’s going on. She’s been a part of the program since the 4th grade. Treasure knows everyone and everyone knows her. But it didn’t start off that way. Treasure was a quiet girl, who slowly built a rich extra-curricular life through her after-school and summer camp experiences. In addition to enjoying trips throughout New York City, Treasure developed her passion for dance. “Through dance, Treasure was able to express herself more,” said Assistant Director Radayza Montas. With the program as a safe space, Treasure felt encouraged to pursue student government. She ran for a position on the student Senate and won. What’s the best part of being a part of the HSVS Beacon family for this long? “There’s always something to do here. It’s great!” she said.

HEARTSHARE ST. VINCENT’S SERVICES

Our Vision

Our commitment to excellent services and supports will enable children, adults and families to reach their fullest potential and lead meaningful lives as active participants in society.

Our Key Commitments

- Making sure that every child we serve is in a safe environment, where they have a loving connection with a caretaker, and access to the social, emotional, and educational support they need to meet their development milestones.
- Empowering and engaging parents through the delivery of a comprehensive set of services and support that help them get their children home as safely and quickly as possible, or keep their children home safely.
- Delivering services to individuals, children and families that have been proven to change lives for the better, and are flexible enough to meet the needs of each individual and his or her unique circumstances.
- Helping youth find and follow their own path to transition into adulthood, become self-sufficient, and achieve their dreams.
- Ensuring staff have the tools and supports they need to achieve the vision of the agency and thrive, both personally and professionally, in an environment that is respectful, inclusive, and enriching.
- Celebrating success in all forms and across all aspects of our agency, and encouraging our staff and the individuals we serve to do so in concert with us.
